Both Hanukkah and Christmas have something in common. Each, with its own story, emphasizes a ray of light, a sense of hope for better times. Darkness surrounds us 16 hours a day. Domestic and foreign issues beset us. We often feel disheartened and dispirited. The lights of the holiday season, the lights of the Hanukkah Menorah are here to lift our spirits. Each Hanukkah night we light an additional candle adding to our excitement and joy. The lights that surround us remind us that even in the midst of darkness we can find joy and hope for the future.

Rabbi Daniel Jezer is rabbi emeritus of Congregation Beth-Sholom-Chevre Shas, where he served for 25 years. He is an adjunct assistant professor at Le Moyne College, and president of the Adjuncts for Change Association. Rabbi Jezer is an emeritus member of the InterFaith Works Round Table of Faiths and a past president of the group's board of directors.
